Early Alert Student Survey Spring 2012

The College of the Sequoias is testing an "Early Alert" system. Using this system, faculty members can send to students email messages about their school work, homework, attendance in class, and the like. Sometimes these alerts are an encouragement. At other times these "alerts" point out areas needing improvement.

According to Banner records, you were sent an early alert message this semester (Spring 2012).

1) How did you receive your Early Alert?

☐ I received an email from my instructor
☐ I was told face-to-face by the instructor
☐ I didn't realize I had been given an early alert until now

2) What actions did you take as a result of receiving the Early Alert?

☐ I contacted the instructor to discuss the course content.
☐ I sought help from the tutoring center or other support services.
☐ I dropped or withdrew from the course.
☐ I received a positive Early Alert and no action was needed on my end.

3) Has the Early Alert System strengthened communications with the instructors who sent you an Early Alert?

☐ Yes, my communication has increased with my instructor(s) since receiving the Early Alert
☐ No, my communication is the same as before the early alert

4) Overall, how effective has the Early Alert System been in improving your success here at COS?

☐ Very Effective
☐ Effective
☐ Ineffective
☐ Very Ineffective

Thank you for taking this survey. Your answers are totally anonymous. We are interested only in the broader feelings of those receiving the alerts, and not the responses of one individual or another.
