Maya Project: Summer Pavillion

Concept Diagram

A tree has characteristics that help provide shade, are strong, and roots that are deep in the ground. The idea for this pavilion is to use the branches and roots of the tree as a way of networking, and to help strengthen the bond between neighboring departments. While doing this it gives an opportunity to be able to establish more outdoor events.

Branch Perspective

South Corridor Perspective

Northwest Perspective

Northeast Perspective

Section

Site Plan

Branches that are placed on the ground, to add seating to visitors.

Rolando Coria
College of the Sequoias
Division of Industry and Technology
ARCH14 Architectural Design 4
Rolando L. Gonzalez, M. Arch, Architect A.I.A.
Spring 2012
A tree has characteristics that help provide shade, are strong, and roots that are deep in the ground. The idea for this pavilion is to use the branches and roots of the tree as a way of networking, and to help strengthen the bond between neighboring departments. While doing this it gives an opportunity to be able to establish more outdoor events.
Branches that are placed on the ground, to add seating to visitors.